

CHAMPION CORN HUSKER IS SENT TO WATERTOWN

This One Had a Novel Plan To Accumulate $10,000 in the Short Space of Six Weeks.

John Milliman, a former inmate of the Watertown hospital, walked into Mayor Schriver's office yesterday, began taking off his clothes with the evident intention of starting a fight. As soon as he was partly stripped for action, he whirled around, took a seat and began explaining to the mayor a novel plan by which he was going to make $10,000 in six weeks. His plan was to go north and pull corn at the rate of 10 cents per bushel; then after that he was going to take moving pictures of all the farms and sell them to the farmers. Just about this time the police who were notified, appeared on the scene, halting Milliman while in the middle of his story. He was taken to the county jail. Investigation by Sheriff John Miller showed that Milliman had been in the Watertown institution at one time, being committed from East Moline several years ago, but lately had been bawling with his father near Cairo, Ill. He was recommended to the hospital by Judge Nels A. Larson in county court and was returned to the hospital today.
